This issue of Breaking the Chains magazine highlights the necessity of building a movement to turn back the assault tide. But that tide is an outgrowth of the brutal and bankrupt capitalist system, itself. Liberal capitalist reformers offer critiques but no solutions. For women to be truly liberated, we must win socialism. This issue includes:

Ronaldo Munck's latest book, Social Movements in Latin America, is a welcome addition to an ongoing discussion on protest movements in the twenty-first century. As stated in the Introduction, Munck seeks to avoid the pitfalls in what he terms "the universal validity for what is sometimes known as 'social movement theory', seen as a self-contained discipline". The result is an ...
