How to Change Beliefs Using NLP Submodalities this property. If you change a submodality, such as bringing an image closer to you, that may be the extent of it. If that image becomes brighter (or dimmer), larger (or smaller) or feels more (or less) intense when you bring it closer, then for you, distance is what is known as a Driver submodality.

How to Change Beliefs Using NLP Submodalities

In NLP we explore the impact of beliefs. We are interested in how they affect us, and we are prepared to examine and 'try on' different beliefs to see what works best. If we believe we can, we probably will. If we believe we can't we're likely to not even try, or try with an attitude of apathy and reluctance.

NLP Techniques | NLP Belief Change. What beliefs work best?

A belief is the linguistic expression of something someone believes in, what someone believes to be true. Beliefs in the NLP are an expression of inner models that each person continuously designs and must constantly design in order to orient himself in the world. Other terms for this are: convictions, attitudes, faiths, opinions.

Finding and changing Beliefs - Landsiedel NLP Training

In effect, voluntary change of submodalities on the part of the subject was often found to alter long-term the concomitant 'feeling' response, paving the way for a number of change techniques based on deliberately changing internal representations. NLP co-originator Richard Bandler in particular has made extensive use of submodality manipulations in the

It is the frustration, challenge or crisis that will tell you which area, or even the specific beliefs to work with using NLP belief change. Sometimes you might have an idea that it is about low self-worth or confidence, for example. And that a crisis might make it quite clear that this leads us into negative relationship or work patterns.
