The Nurse As Wounded Healer

Nurse as a Wounded Healer Theory The Nurse as Wounded Healer Theory (NWHT) was developed by Dr. Marion Conti-O'Hare in her 2002 book The Nurse as Wounded Healer: From Trauma to Transcendence. In her book, Dr. Conti-O'Hare draws on her decades of experience as a registered nurse in the psychiatric setting to argue that nurses can only effectively heal others if they first heal themselves.

Trauma may be personal, professional, or both. How a nurse copes with their own trauma directly impacts patient care. Trauma does not resolve on its own. A nurse needs to transform themselves from "walking wounded" to "wounded healer". The nursing profession is wounded in itself and needs to heal from within.

The Nurse As Wounded Healer by Jennifer Mazur - Prezi

Dr. O'Hare confronts the nurse's ability to transcend personal pain in order to create therapeutic rapport with others. Just like the famous saying goes, "Pain changes a person." and how we cope will determine if we will be a "walking wounded" or a "wounded healer".

Wounded healer is a term created by psychologist Henri Nouwen. The idea states that an analyst is compelled to treat patients because the analyst himself is "wounded." The idea may have Greek mythology origins. Research has shown that 73.9% of counselors and psychotherapists have experienced one or more wounding experiences leading to their career choice. As an example, of the "wounded healer phenomenon" between an analyst and his/her analyzed: The analyst is consciously aware of ...
